DANGER !

SPOOKS AT WORK

Welcome to New TARGET issue number Forty-Two

For new readers, we view our task as demonstrating our opposition to Searchlight's policy of exposing and harassing political opponents and their families at their homes, in the street and at their workplaces. Since our conception, it has never been our intention to present political policies, but simply to demonstrate to Searchlight, and its supporters, that they too are vulnerable to the exposure tactics that they either employ, or support. While Searchlight continues to print photographs and personal details of political opponents, then New TARGET will reciprocate by publishing details of Searchlight supporters.

We would like to make it clear however, we would NOT wish to see any Searchlight supporters exposed by New TARGET being subjected to intimidation or harassment. But, all Searchlight supporters should be aware that, SELF-DEFENCE IS NO OFFENCE, and we will continue to defend ourselves by exposing them, until they condemn Searchlight's tactics, and assist us in defeating this evil.

Until Victory!

BEWARE ! SPOOKS AT WORK !

The Police or State Security services recent clumsy attempts to recruit a member of the environmental group, Plane Stupid, to spy on her colleagues in return for favours or cash, is a timely reminder of the extent the state will go to in order to criminalise legitimate political activity and legitimate protest.

Tilly Gifford. Recorded Spooks conversations

When interviewed at a Strathclyde police station, following her arrest during a climate change protest, Plane Stupid activist, Tilly Gifford had the foresight to secretly record the conversation between her and two men claiming to be officers from Strathclyde police.

Further meetings were also recorded by Tilly, during which she was variously offered large sums of tax free cash, assistance should she ever be arrested in the future, and, grave warnings of the treatment she could receive if she was ever sent to prison.

During the conversations, the spooks revealed they had "hundreds" of informants inside political groups of both the left and the right, as well as in various protest groups.

It may sound distinctly sinister but, this tactic is not illegal, nor is it new. The worry is the level of implied threats if the target is not cooperative.

While a "friendly" approach is much preferred to the type of brutal attacks launched by some London police officers during the recent G20 protests, all should be aware that the ultimate goal is the same, the suppression of any form of dissent !

Through greed and incompetence, this government is nearing the end of its days of power.

During its reign the British people have suffered increased surveillance through a massive growth of CCTV cameras, the compilation of mass DNA databases of innocent people, an increase in government inspired police violence towards any type of protest, and state infiltration and subversion of legal political groups and parties.

Be warned; the spooks are within!

Election Special .. June 2009

TRADE UNION LEADERS TO THE RESCUE

With the absence of traditional left parties in this June's EU elections, the anti-Labour Party / extreme-left campaign, is for the first time being fought by the leaders of two trade unions.

SOCIALIST LABOUR PARTY

The leader of the now miniscule, National Union of Mineworkers, Arthur Scargill surprised everybody when he announced that his SLP would be standing a full slate of candidates in the EU elections, especially as would mean finding around 70 odd candidates, just about the entire SLP membership! Another surprise is that "King Arthur" is standing in the London constituency instead of his native Yorkshire.

No2EU PARTY

Bob Crow, General Secretary of the Rail workers union, RMT, and leader of the newly formed, No2EU party has done remarkably well in getting enough candidates to stand a full slate of candidates, especially as just a month ago Crow was the one and only No2EU candidate! Obviously quantity rather than quality has been Bob's criteria and this is reflected in his choice of candidates. Nick Wrack is billed as the party's number 2 candidate. A former editor of the Militant newspaper, Nick was booted out of the SWP a couple of years ago and became national organiser of the Respect coalition. Being bored to death with nothing to organise in a party barely breathing, Nick has jumped ship to join No2EU. Nick is a serial joiner of parties and if you wait long enough he will one day apply to join yours. Rob Griffiths, the General-Secretary of the Stalinist, Communist Party of Britain, is another "no-hope" candidate. Perhaps the biggest surprise of the campaign is in Scotland where Tommy Sheridan, has abandoned the Solidarity Party that he founded after being expelled from the Scottish Socialist Party, and is standing as a No2EU candidate! That's if he isn't in prison by then!

This June's EU elections are likely to be a disaster for New Labour following the disclosures of massive expenses frauds by several of its MPs. So who will pick up the mantle of the left? Below are a few groups who spend their days advocating "greater democracy" but have chosen to avoid involvement in the democratic system.

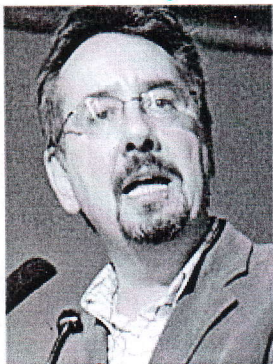

RESPECT. George Galloway's Respect Party are the latest left-wing party to decide not to field any candidates in the forthcoming European Elections. In a statement issued on their website Respect warns that voter apathy could assist the BNP in winning one or more seats in the European Parliament, but at the same time they will not challenge the BNP at the hustings. Instead, they are urging supporters to vote for the Green Party.

RESPECT MK2.

How John Rees must now regret his backdoor challenge against George Galloway's leadership of Respect, which led to Rees leaving Galloway and the formation of RESPECT MK2.

Also as a result of this rash move, "Big John" was kicked off of the executive of the SWP.

His new party is dying on its feet and is certainly in no position to mount a national campaign. In the past John, and his partner Lindsey German, have stood as candidates in all manner of elections, but not this time.

SOCIALIST WORKERS PARTY

It will come as no surprise that the SWP are not fielding any candidates in this election. Democracy has never really featured on the SWP's agenda and the party are nearly bankrupt. The SWP were banned from joining Bob Crow's No2EU party, probably at the behest of Nick Wrack, Kevin Ovenden and Rob Hoverman, all No2EU candidates who were expelled from the SWP a couple of years ago. Therefore, this election is probably the first that the SWP haven't had a convenient electoral "front" to hide behind.

COMMUNIST PARTY of GREAT BRITAIN

The CPGB is better known on the left as the "got any spare change guv?" party for its eternal begging bowl tactics rather than for contesting elections. After all, what does democracy have to do with Communists? As Comrade Robbie Rix is fond of saying, "when the revolution comes, remember the "Fighting Fund"

SOCIALIST PARTY OF GREAT BRITAIN

This little known group are fielding just 8 candidates, all in London, where their top of the list, Daniel Lambert (who)? will be fighting Bob Crow and "King Arthur" for the left vote. We wonder what genius planned that move?

SEARCHLIGHT and SPOOKS

It has become less common nowadays for spooks to make direct approaches themselves, instead they prefer to use stooges such as Searchlight. Also, it is a misconception that Searchlight only spies on right-wing targets.

Searchlight watchers will recall in the late 1970s Gerry Gable, then a television company researcher with impeccable left-wing credentials was exposed as a self-confessed informant for the security services then involved in prosecuting a group of radical journalists in the "ABC" Official Secrets trial.

Since then, Gable, now the publisher of Searchlight, has made a lucrative career of working with the British State Security services both informing on left-wing comrades, and recruiting informants from within the ranks of the political right.

The extreme-left, Red Action found to their costs the dangers of working too close with Searchlight. Having modelled their security structure on that successfully adopted by the IRA, the Security Services were desperate to identify active members and organisers. With the help of Searchlight a "sting operation" was mounted under the code name "Operation Blackshirt". In 1991, Searchlight provided some tempting "intelligence" to Red Action, who were then lured to mounting an attack on nationalists at Kensington Library in London, and straight into the waiting arms of the police. Over a dozen arrests were made including the de-facto leader of Red Action, Gary O'Shea. Red Action had at last been identified!

Searchlight's Gerry Gable, who had attended the attack, was allowed to escape arrest and make his way to the United States where he stayed until the dust died down.

When neo-Nazi Ray Hill got himself into financial bother it was Gable's Searchlight that he contacted. Gable turned the former British Movement activist into an informant. Hill was rewarded for his treachery with a lucrative exposé deal with a Sunday newspaper. Hill also got a regular sum of money from Searchlight for supposedly writing a regular column in Searchlight. In reality the articles were written by Gable.

Matthew Collins turned to Searchlight in an attempt to revenge himself on former C18 colleagues after they refused to "let him in". Poor Matt has a complex common to obese people, that of needing to be "someone important". Gable rewarded his treachery by giving Matty his very own column in Searchlight and a lucrative television interview.

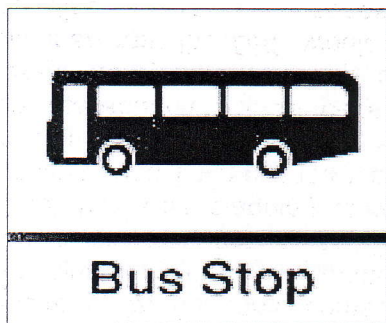

Matthew Collins

Peter Marriner, a hard-line Nazi homosexual, with a penchant for attacking and robbing fellow homosexuals, claimed in a legal document that he was first approached by MI5 and was paid by them to inform on several nationalist groups before being handed over to Searchlight to continue his paid work.

Searchlight are a bigger threat to democracy than any Muslim terror group and will continue to prosper as long as they are allowed to go unchallenged. We at New TARGET have a successful track record in challenging Searchlight by exposing them. Defend the right to be different, defend the right to protest, and defend democracy.

NATIONALISTS STOP BUS

The Nationalist, British Peoples Party are claiming victory over Searchlight's "Hope Not Hate" bus which is being used to campaign against the BNP. When Kate Dermody, the BPP's Bradford organizer tried to organize a political demonstration last year in Bradford she was told by officials, as there was likely to be opposition to her demonstration she, and the BPP, must comply with the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 and must provide adequate medical staff, amongst other requirements, in case someone was injured. So when Ms Dermody discovered that the Searchlight "Hate" bus was planning to visit Bradford, and its presence would be classified as a "public event" she contacted the local councils Public Safety Liason Group and told them that the BPP would be mounting an opposing demonstration against Searchlight and its bus, and this would create a public safety issue! Kate then demanded that if Searchlight were to come to Bradford they must adhere to the safety legislation. Two weeks later, the BPP have been informed by the local authority that the "Hate" bus will no longer be stopping in Bradford!

SEARCHLIGHT'S MP IS CAUGHT MILKING THE SYSTEM

Jon Cruddas, the Labour MP with close ties to Searchlight has been caught in the spotlight with his nose firmly in the trough. Cruddas, the MP for the London Borough of Dagenham has claimed £86,000 through the controversial second-home allowance since 2004. He justified this vast sum by claiming that his main home was a £100,000 former council-owned terraced house in his Dagenham constituency, just 13 miles from Westminster, and a £500,000 mansion apartment in fashionable North London was his second home. But Cruddas, whose honesty fits in well with the Searchlight gang, was rumbled when neighbors in Dagenham stated they hardly ever saw him and his family never lived at the house. They were of course living in the luxurious North London home just half a mile from his child's elite Catholic school! Now Cruddas has been caught he has announced that he is to change his second home status to his Dagenham house, but he hasn't offered to pay back the £86,000 of taxpayer's money he milked!

Searchlight's Jon Cruddas

SEARCHLIGHT ADMITS COMMUNIST INSPIRATION

Every time Searchlight attempts to convince their trade union paymasters that they are not loony left-wing extremists someone seems to put their foot in it.

This time it is none other than Searchlight editor, Nick Lowles, who gave the game away in the April edition of the National Union of Mineworkers magazine, The Miner.

Under the title "Fighting Fascism with Hope Not Hate", Nick confesses, "There was nothing new in this approach. Much of our inspiration came from the Communist Party in East London in the 1930s".

So there you have it!
